MINERS STILL OUT

Operators Balk at Expense Increase of $16,000 Per Day, Says Union

MEMPHIS, Tenn.—(AP)—With four workers for the Southern Tenant Farmers Union in custody at Blytheville for investigation into charges of inciting labor, officials of the sharecroppers' organization said here Tuesday that cotton pickers in Arkansas and Oklahoma had been asked to leave the fields effective immediately.

Coal Peace Doubtful
WASHINGTON—(AP)—A new ultimatum from the miners to the mine operators raised doubts Tuesday as to the speed with which the soft coal strike might be settled.

John L. Lewis, president of the United Miner Workers of America, emerged from a conference on the theory problem with an assertion that the miners would not agree to less than 9 cents per ton increase in pay for the men who dig and load coal.

Assistant Secretary of Labor McReady reported that the operators are willing to agree to a 7½-cent boost.

Coal Strike Continues
WASHINGTON—(AP)—Negotiations to settle the soft coal strike were resumed Tuesday, with the stumbling block reported to be a difference of 1½ cents per ton in the pay of the miners who dig and load coal.

Philip Murray, vice-president of the United Mine Workers, said: "The stumbling block is the refusal of the operators to split the difference of three cents—which would cost the operators $16,000 daily spread over one and a half million tons."

Relief administration officials reported that relief funds for the striking coal miners would not be provided unless actual need for relief occurred and the National Labor Relations board made an official report that the dispute was justified.

Fight in Texas
DALLAS, Texas—(AP)—Street fighting broke out again among striking garment workers and employees here Tuesday.

Four women were hurried off to jail after a hair-pulling and fist-fighting scene in front of a downtown garment factory.

THE STAR turned over to Oscar D. Middlebrooks Monday a sheaf of newspaper pages showing wide distribution of the Associated Press story last week-end concerning his champion watermelon. It was no new honor either for Mr. Middlebrooks, who won the championship in 1930 also, or for Hempstead county, which has been growing the largest commercial melons in the world for the last 15 years. But the wide publicity repeated this year does show the need for a better marketing organization to follow up this valuable advertising.

Noe and Fournet to Fight Machine

Will Present Complete Slate Opposing Gov. Allen's Ticket

NEW ORLEANS, La.—(AP)—Internal strife Monday threatened to dash hopes of the Long machine for victory in the January Democratic primary.

Gov. O. K. Allen, who took all his orders from Long, has proved an unsatisfactory successor to the dictator who personally selected all his machine's political candidates and who seldom lost an election.

The disgruntled followers of Long in their 24-hour caucus wrangling of Saturday succeeded in harmonizing the contending political ambitions in their ranks with the exception of the demand of James A. Noel, lieutenant governor and close political friend of Long, that his announcement for governor be endorsed.

Noel announced that he would split the Long forces open with a complete independent slate of candidates which he said would be "the best ticket in the field."

Noel returned to New Orleans, went into conference with one of his political friends, Justice John B. Fournet of the state supreme court and said that a Noel ticket was being prepared. "There was some belief that Noel would 'fall into line' and not bolt the Long forces who are beset with the determined opposition from the anti-Long forces with Cleveland Dear, Eighth District congressman, as candidate for governor."

DeWolf Hopper of Stage Fame Dies

Veteran Actor, 77, Recited "Casey at the Bat" 10,000 Times

KANSAS CITY, Mo.—(AP)—DeWolf Hopper died Monday—talking baseball to the end. The big 77-year-old comedian, whose resonant voice boomed more than 10,000 times that dramatic line, "The mighty Casey had struck out," died of heart disease at a hospital after diagnosing his doctor that he might read the sport pages.

"Run along while I see what the Cards did," the six-times-married radio and stage star told an attending physician Sunday night. They were among the last words spoken by the man who made famous the recitation of "Casey at the Bat."

At Oakland, Cal., his sixth wife, Mrs. Lillian Glaser Hopper, a singer, disclosed that the actor's death had cut short plans for a motion picture venture. She will fly here and accompany him.

John Barrymore in Flight From Love

Actor Hides From Elaine Barrie in New Mexico Indian Reservation

GALLUP, N. M.—(AP)—Haggard, nervous and unshaven, John Barrymore, the "great lover" of the films, hid on the reservation of the Zuni Indians near here Monday night "to get away from things."

He was undecided as to how long he will remain here.

In Hollywood, his wife, the former Dolores Costello, was cold to all reports of Barrymore's hopes of reconciliation.

In New York, 20-year-old Elaine Barrie, the ex-protege whom he eluded in a hide-and-seek game of trains, planes and taxis, said she hoped to get in touch with him soon.

They separated after a quarrel Thursday.

Barrymore said he was looking forward to a reunion with wife, "a very lovely and gracious woman."

He expressed hope that Miss Barrie, "a very talented actress," would come to Hollywood—but he called all romance reports "hoax."

He was questioned about an eight-carat ring reportedly given Miss Barrie. He snorted:

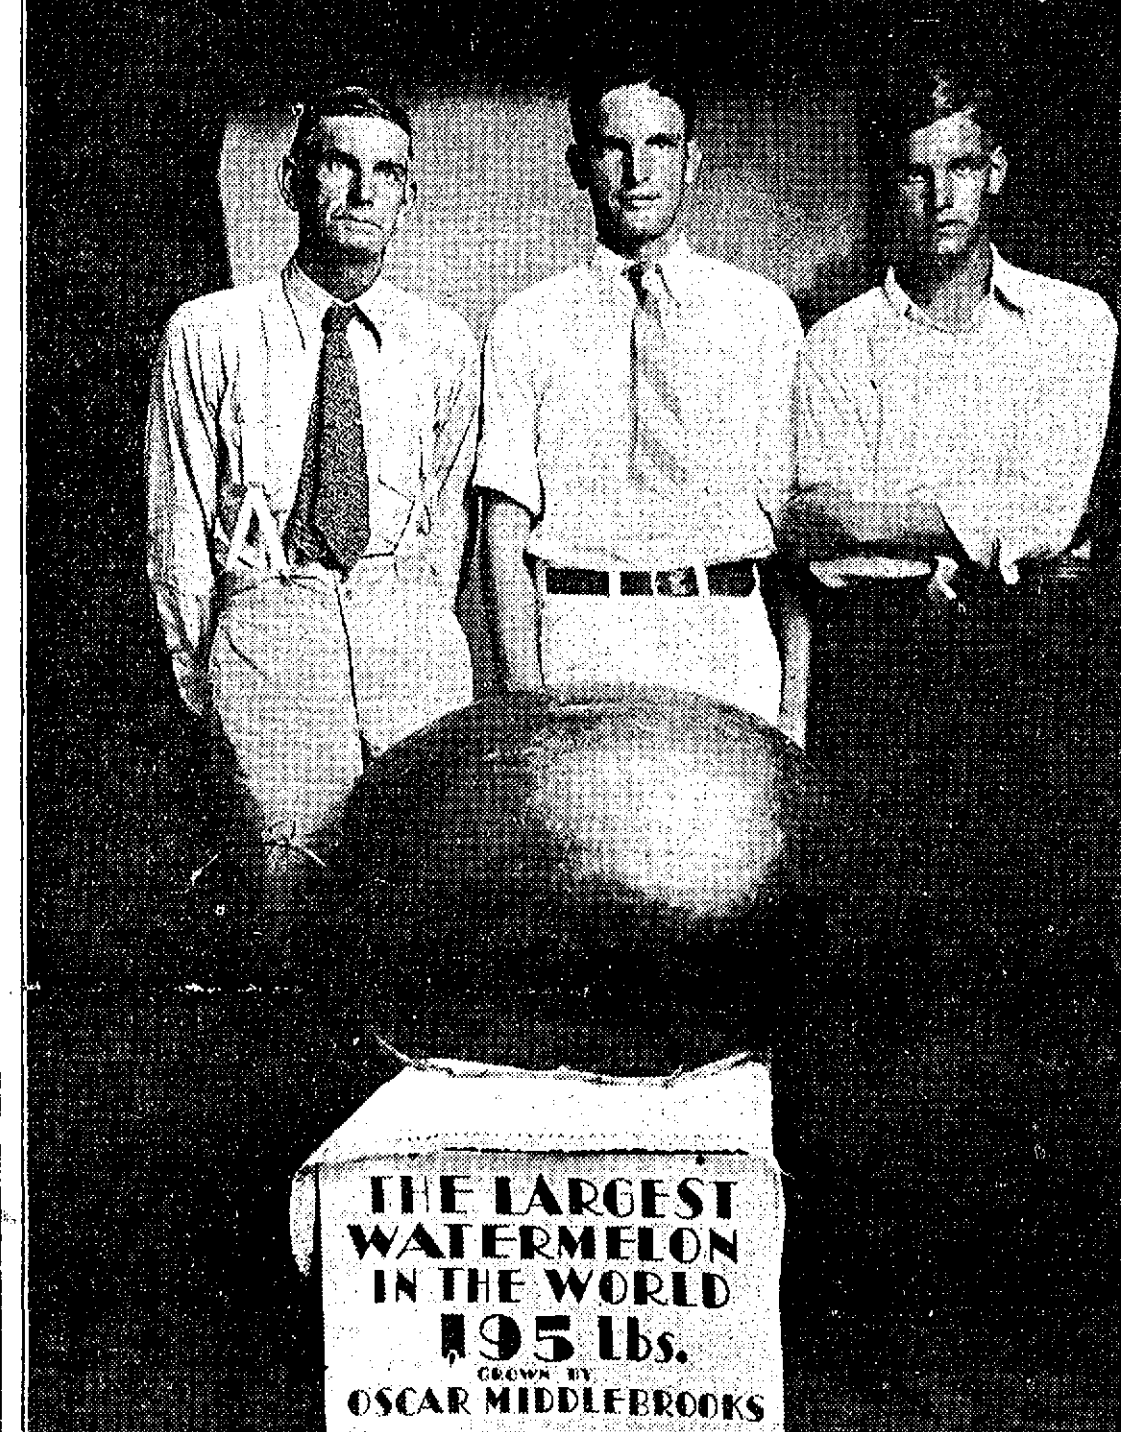

"I've given away a hell of a lot of diamonds," he said.

But in Los Angeles lawyers filed an answer for the actor to Mrs. Barrymore's divorce suit. They said that Barrymore spent on his wife all but $100,000 of the $250,000 he received last year. They denied cruel charges.

The Hurry On went down Monday night in a gale which struck her off Henry Island, 22 miles west of here. She carried 12 men. Of the six men in the lifeboat only one was conscious.

Bankhead Cotton Tax May Be Cut

6-Cents-Per-Pound Levy May Be Reduced 3-Cent, Says Byrnes

WASHINGTON—(AP)—A three-fourth of a cent reduction in the six-cents-a-pound tax on cotton produced in excess of Bankhead act allotments was predicted Monday by Senator James F. Byrnes of South Carolina.

After calling at the White House, Byrnes said under the cotton control law it would be possible to lower the levy, thus assuring a greater return to growers.

The Farm Administration's subsidy system, assuring farmers 12 cents a pound on cotton produced within Bankhead allotments, and the base period upon which 1926 allotments are to be computed were discussed later by Byrnes, Senator Bankhead of Alabama and Chester Davis, farm administrator.

The administration is considering a plan whereby cotton co-operatives may pay the subsidy, which is to be paid by the government.

League Committee Abandons Effort

Will Throw Italo-Ethiopian Dispute Into Council Thursday

GENEVA, Switzerland—(AP)—The Italo-Ethiopian committee of the League of Nations Tuesday gave up its efforts to prevent war in East Africa and prepared to throw the whole critical situation into the lap of the League council.

The committee, representing Great Britain, France, Spain, Poland and Turkey, decided unanimously to submit to the council its historic report describing the committee's activities in narrative form.

The council is expected to receive the report Thursday morning, and Italian sources indicated that when the council meets the Italian delegation will probably be absent.

Mussolini Spurs for Time

LONDON, Eng.—(AP)—Some quarters in Europe's diplomatic circles saw faint hope Monday night for further peace negotiations in the Italo-Ethiopian war threat.

A midnight announcement was made at Geneva by Mussolini's spokesman, Baron Pompeo Aloisi, that Aloisi's "observations" rejecting the League's peace plan, should not necessarily be considered "official."

Some observers held that Mussolini in this "about-facing" on the official character of Aloisi's remarks to Chairman Madadanga of the League Committee of Five which drew up the peace plan, wished to keep the way to conciliation open.

Other sources said Il Duce's action indicated that he wished to have no official relations with the League, maintaining "his liberty of action."

Aloisi's observations—reported to be demands for a belt of Ethiopian territory running west of Addis Ababa and connecting the Italian colonies of Eritrea and Somalia—total disarmament of Ethiopia and placing of that nation's army under Italian command—were characterized earlier by the British as "moving all hope for conciliation."

CRATED, 300 POUNDS

Musical Star Sends Appreciate Telegram Accepting Committee Offer

Smiling Dick Powell, Arkansas' gift to sweet music and the motion picture screen, will get the Middlebrooks 195-pound world champion watermelon.

This was decided Tuesday following telephone conversations between the committee and the office of Senator Joe T. Robinson at Little Rock, where it was learned that the original presentation to President Roosevelt could not be carried through because the president will be absent from Washington on tour.

The melon was then offered to Dick Powell in a telegram to Hollywood, and the committee Tuesday received the following reply:

"Haven't eaten an Arkansas melon in 10 years, but I can't forget how much I used to enjoy them. You are very kind to send it, and I'll promise to do justice to the world's largest and Arkansas' finest watermelon. DICK POWELL."

Manager Arthur Swanke of the Saenger theater said plans are under way to have Powell and a battery of Paramount News cameras on hand when the Arkansas champion arrives in the motion picture capital.

The melon is being shipped by express late Tuesday. Crated, it weighs more than 300 pounds, and the express charge alone will be $24.

Some wag on the committee reported a slight delay during the afternoon while carpenters built a larger crate—so all the girls could write their names on it!

Terrell Cornelius, J. R. Henry, Roy Anderson and others conducted a downtown canvass for premium funds, the premium to Oscar D. Middlebrooks and his sons, Arnold J. and Melvin, being expected to reach $100.

The melon was on display over the week-end at Hope Furniture company's store, in a show window overlooking Third street, with a banner hung across the street—route of the Broadway of America—advertising the world's largest watermelon to passing tourists, many of whom stopped to look.

Emperor Prowls and Is Arrested

Selassie, Incognito, Tries Out Efficiency of the Palace Guards

ADDIS ABABA—(AP)—Emperor Haile Selassie was arrested Sunday night by three of his palace guards in succession—and the three were decorated.

The emperor is in the habit of donning peasant costume and making surprise inspections of Addis Ababa at night, seeing how his people live, whether the streets are clean, and checking up on the policemen.

Sunday night he returned to the palace after curfew. The king of kings, found three of the imperial gates barred. At each gate he was arrested by the sentry on duty and only released when a sergeant was called out. There, after an argument, the guard allowed his sovereign to enter.

This act, however, almost cost the fourth guard his head, because the emperor, as a reward for his vigilance, decreed that the three soldiers who had refused him admittance and disciplined the man who allowed him to enter.

Child May Punish You With Finger Sucking.

There are ways to get your baby to stop sucking its fingers or biting its fingernails, and there are ways to make the child like it. Just try to lay too much stress on this idea of finger sucking, and you'll more than likely see it get worse.

For then the child will find it can obtain rewards, and can irritate you, and it will use this form to punish you. Finger sucking, or biting the nails, is a common habit among children and should not be regarded as a sign of abnormality. But you should do everything possible to stop it, to prevent deformity of jaws and teeth.

Usually finger sucking occurs when the child is sleepy or when it is nervous, fatigued, sick, or when it is over-tired. Most children get over it suddenly. Girls particularly will stop when they are made to realize that it will bring an unsightly appearance.

Mothers used to cover the fingers of their children with all sorts of bad-tasting substances, to prevent the habit. Among these substances were tincture of valerian, tincture of asafoetida, compound tincture of gentian, and mixtures containing quinine or quassia. But many a child relished these bitter drugs, and generally the treatment failed to have permanent results.

Nowadays mechanical devices are used to prevent finger sucking and nail biting. A simple cuff, extending over the elbow and so preventing the child from bending its arm and putting its fingers into its mouth, is very useful.

There are aluminum mitts which can be tied around the hands, and various awkward chain devices which make thumb sucking and nail biting unattractive.

Some parents have been able to prevent continuance of the habit by giving the child a rubber pacifier or some similar object to take the place of the thumb, and then removing the pacifier when the child has grown out of it.

Another method of breaking the thumb-sucking and nail-biting habit is by giving the child a substitute interest.

Thus the child may be provided with constructive toys, such as puzzles, things to cut, molding clay, miniature buildings, including hammers and nails and blocks and other things. These will keep his mind, body, and attention focused, so that he will have something else to do besides biting his own fingers.

A BOOK A DAY

By BRUCE CATTION

He Saved the West for Infant America

Most people remember Oliver Hazard Perry today because he had a singular gift for the expressive phrase. "We have met the enemy and they are ours," "takes rank with Caesar's 'Veni, vidi, vici' as a model of narrative brevity.

But the man is worth knowing for other reasons. If he had lost the battle of Lake Erie, Britain would in all probability have seized the greater part of western North America. The boundaries of the United States would have ended at the Ohio and the Mississippi and the nation would have been stunted from the very cradle.

So says Charles J. Dutton in "Oliver Hazard Perry," a book which oddly enough is the first biography of the great naval hero to be printed in some 90 years.

It is Mr. Dutton's idea that Perry was not only one of our greatest naval officers, but that he was also the one man who kept that confused and abortive war of 1812 from being a tremendous national calamity. He shows, too, that Perry did what he did because of his own great ability.

The story of how Perry came to the western wilderness, built a fleet of green timber, rounded up a backwoods crew and whipped a British fleet is interesting both as history and drama. Mr. Dutton tells it well and gives a well-rounded picture of Perry's personality. The book's only defect is that it lacks a map.

Published by Longmans, Green & Co., it sells for $3.50.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Cherished Finery.

When we were little we were fortunate. Most of the children in the public school we went to were in much the same circumstances as ourselves. Stockings were frankly darned at the knees and shoes were half-soled or patched as needed. Yes, the patch was a good old standby. We didn't enjoy them, but they were accepted as part of life, like hash or the second table.

We wore the same dresses to school day after day—lucky if we had one to change with—but our "good" dresses, one apiece, hung in the wardrobe of our mother's room for a rainy day. Or perhaps a birthday or a party. Also our good shoes were set apart for special wear. The same with hats and coats, gloves and scarves. Needless to say that when some of these articles were seasoned enough to be used every day, they were too small to be of use. Many a time I saw a beloved pair of "best" shoes, or a prized coat that had encased me only on Sundays, handed over to a small sister. Naturally, being younger than my sister, I inherited many of her out-grows clothes.

Why Not Wear Them Out? could I not have put on my best bib and tucker and worn it to school to "show" them? There was a beautiful gray cashmere trimmed in wine-colored velvet that the kids in school never had a chance to gasp over. Not once had they seen it, yet it went in a box to my cousin. The same with a tan coat, red lined, trimmed in beaver fur. There I was traipsing through the park day after day in my old blue, or Mary's old blue reefer, and I wanted to yell "I've got a swell coat at home you never saw. I have lot of things at home you never saw."

It never occurred to me that the other children also had their untouchables at home, too. It was the custom of the day to keep certain things for certain occasions and to clothe the weekly body in Sunday raiment was not to be thought of.

There were also the best Sunday tablecloth and the Sunday dishes. We used to keep linen strips on the stairs to save the carpet from wear and grime. There were two of these strips. On Saturday the soiled one was removed and the newly laundered strip fastened to place. The pavement was scrubbed, and sometimes reddened—bricks you know—on Saturday. The brass hinges on the front door were shined.

Training in Conservation There was great fixing up all around. Bodies and heads were glorified with special care. Extra marketing was done and the feast prepared. (And on Sunday we went to Church and Sunday School and ate to our heart's content but otherwise were scarcely allowed to move. We chafed, but it was good for us. Our souls and bodies needed refreshment, but they also needed regimentation.

Today's children? I wonder how much will they know of conservation? Families have learned to put a neat foot foremost and it is good and right and proper, too.

Children miss something that is very good for them—restraint. That idea of an ace in the hole, even a shabby one as it was sometimes, contributed to our own compass to our lives. Something to be respected and saved and thought about. The great wardrobe that could have made us into poppy-heads but wisely withheld its treasures. We loved it and hated it. Wise old wardrobe.

Gambling Probe in Capital Is Ordered

Little Rock Judge Instructs Grand Jury to Curb Bookmaking

LITTLE ROCK—Gambling in Pulaski county became a live issue again Monday when Judge McGhee in First Division Circuit Court told the September grand jury that enforcement of the anti-gambling law is a problem for the grand jury and peace officers of the county.

It is the easiest thing in the world to stop gambling," said Judge McGhee. "The officers of Greater Little Rock and Pulaski county can stop it within a week. It is your duty to see that they do it. The mayors of the two cities and the sheriff are the heads of these law enforcement agencies and may be removed from office for failure to do their sworn duties."

Judge McGhee challenged the report of the March grand jury, which last week admitted that gambling, particularly betting on horse races, had increased in the face of grand jury efforts to stamp out the evil. The report blamed lack of convictions and lack of law enforcement on the attitude of the public. The report suggested that the public demand rigid enforcement or open countenancing of gambling.

Judge McGhee charged that race bookmakers are well known. "Officers on beats cannot help but know where they operate," he said. "It would not take much of a drive to round up the estimated 150 policy writers in the county."

Insisting that there is no necessity for open tolerance of gambling in the county, he told the grand jury, "you have plenty of weapons to use in a drive against gamblers and it is your duty to use these weapons."

as some of the more complicated treatments.

For instance, nothing is more disconcerting than to discover a blemish (it always looks larger to you than to others) on your nose about fifteen minutes before you are going to a party. However, if you have handy a small stick of one of the preparations that cover blemishes quickly, harmlessly and thoroughly, you can put a thin film of it over the blotch, cover with makeup and rest assured that you look lovely.

If you keep a bottle of liquid powder on your bathroom shelf, evening makeup for back and shoulders becomes less of a problem. One of these properly applied, allowed to dry and whisked lightly with a piece of cotton will keep your back perfectly groomed all evening.

Polish remover and a bottle of polish that matches exactly the shade your manicurist puts on your nails are handy items to have around the house. When polish on one nail chips, remove the rest of it and cover with a fresh coat.

If you have a supply of small metal curlers on hand, you never have to worry about your ringlets. Moisten the ends and roll them on curlers the minute you get home from the office. Remove and brush over your finger just before you are ready to leave to keep your dinner date.

Accessories Whet Zest for Bath.

Now bath preparations to glorify your beauty this fall and winter are more intriguing than ever before.

There is, for instance, a special body perfume that you can pour over your self from head to foot. Inexpensive and done up in a diamond cut flacon that looks hand-once on any bathroom shelf, this is especially nice for girls who seldom wear perfume in the daytime. The fragrance lingers for hours.

Remember, of course, that the ideal bath equipment includes items of matching odor. If you like like skin perfume, try to get like soap and bath powder. If gardenia soap is your favorite, toilet water and bath powder that harmonize are readily available.

Incidentally, for those who need only the mildest type of treatment, there are deodorant bath powders in regular boxes, and in talcum powder cans. Don't keep powder in the bathroom. The steam is apt to ruin it.

Also important to your bathing-facility routine are long-handled bath brushes with flexible bristles that stimulate sluggish circulation and help to keep skin on arms, back and shoulders clear and scrupulously clean. When you have finished your bath, and use only a few drops at a time always turn the brush upside down to allow it to drain thoroughly. Pine oil generally appeals to the outdoor type of girl. Gardenia, rose and lily of the valley are for feminine beauties. Carnation is spicy and most refreshing.

The BLUE DOOR

by Rachel Mack © 1935 NEA Service, Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY RUTH WOODSON, pretty, high-spirited girl of 19, in search of work, seeks refuge from a storm in an old house with a blue door in the little town of Worthville. The queer old caretaker, BERTHA CHAMBERS, also known as PENNY, looks back to the days when ELAINE CHAMBERS, whose grandfather built the house, Ruth falls in love with JOHN McNEILL, the young man next door, and resolves to stay on a while, posing as Elaine.

Elaine Chambers, at Grayson College, vows in a sorority meeting to win the love of her childhood hero, John McNeill. She resolves to go to Worthville, Elaine goes to New York for a week-end and learns from her mother, HELEN HUNTER, that her uncle, HENRY HUNTER, has escaped from an asylum.

John receives a letter from Elaine and discovers that the girl in the Hunter house is a fake. However, he loves her and plans to tell her so before he can do so he is called out of town. He leaves a note of explanation to Ruth, but Bertha destroys it. Ruth thinks John has gone away to disgust because of her conduct. She is sleepless that night and goes to the library to get a book. There she finds a half-written suicide note, still wet with ink.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XXIV

JUST as John McNeill had forgotten his personal problems in his sister's grief, so Ruth Woodson now forgot everything but the person who had written the note and dropped it, to flee at her approach.

Without any thought of fear, Ruth picked up the brass candlestick which supported her lighted candle and went through the dark door of the drawing room. The place was empty and the door into the hall stood open. Someone was going up the stairs. She followed.

The steps, well ahead of her, did not stop at the second floor. On they went, padding up the stairs to the unknown region above. Ruth followed, running lightly and breathlessly.

At the open door of an unlighted room a tall man faced her. "Well?" he said tonelessly.

Ruth said, "I've come to stop you!"

The man laughed, softly and unpleasantly. "And what have I to say to the stepdaughter and ward of Ligate Deal, my dear niece?"

Ruth said, knowing him now to be Duncan Hunter, "I'm not Elaine Chambers. I've only pretended to be. I've been behind the blue door, too. Tomorrow I'm going away."

She noticed a certain elegance about the tall, thin man wrapped in the old lounging robe.

Ruth said, "You're Duncan Hunter. I've seen your name in the books downstairs. I've enjoyed your books, Mr. Hunter!" He laughed, this time almost naturally. Ruth thought, "I must make him talk to me."

She said, looking around the cluttered hallway, "Can't we sit down and talk? I've been wakeful, too."

Pirates Virtually Ruin Cards' Hopes

Defeat Puts St. Louis 3½ Games Behind Cubs—They Meet Wednesday

ST. LOUIS, Mo., (AP)—The Pittsburgh Pirates walloped the St. Louis Cardinals, 12 to 0, Monday and left the 1934 world champions with little more than hope they can pass the league-leading Chicago Cubs and win another pennant.

Chief Bueccinieri was Jim Weaver, pitcher, who limited the Cards to four hits, two of them in the ninth, and Floyd Young, second baseman, who drove in seven runs.

The defeat shoved the second-place Cardinals 3½ games behind the Cubs, who come here Wednesday for a five-game series to end the season. Chicago was idle Monday and Tuesday. St. Louis could lose Tuesday and take the pennant by sweeping the Cub series.

Three runs were scored by the Pirates in the first inning almost before the crowd of 7,500 had settled down for the game. Young's double, one of the two among his three hits, scored Wendy Jenson, Lloyd Waner and Arky Vaughan, but Young was out at third trying to stretch the blow.

Jensen had opened with a double and was safe at third when Durocher struck him with the ball as he tried to nab the Pirate after fielding Lloyd Waner's blow. Waner went to second. Vaughan was walked. Then Young's timely double.

In the third occurred the slaughter and the retirement of Ed Houser, first of five pitchers Frankie Frisch sent to the mound. Four straight hits, the last by Young scoring two runs, finished Houser. Tony Kaufmann was touched for three runs before the inning closed.

Frigh's hit in the fourth was the first off Weaver, who yielded another to Pinch Hitter Sam Narmon in the sixth and two in the ninth—Davis and Gelbert. The Cards' only serious threat was in the final inning. Medwick, clean-up batter, popped to Young. Davis, who was sent to first base for Jim Collins in the ninth, singled to center. Durocher was safe when Young fumbled the ball and Davis reached second. Lyle Judy, base stealing sensation of the Western Association this year, fled out to Lloyd Waner. Gelbert singled to left and the bases were full as Dizzy Dean went to bat for Phil Collins. Dizzy grounded out to Young.

Pittsburgh's 16 hits were distributed about equally between four players—Jensen four, and Young, Lloyd Waner and Vaughan each three. Weaver's record was marred somewhat by seven bases on balls but they did not prove disastrous.

DeWolf Hopper

pany the body to New York where it will be cremated.

An aviation enthusiast he often flew here for his radio appearances. Hopper had talked last night of plans to visit Mrs. Hopper by plane.

He appeared here Sunday for his weekly broadcast with the Kansas City Rhythm symphony although obviously in distress. He had to be persuaded by friends to go to a hospital afterward.

"His heart was gone," said Dr. H. P. Baughman. "This was a sick body with a mind and spirit that would not admit it."

Spurning a law career planned by his parents, Hopper turned to the stage and appeared on it for 37 years.

His marital ventures included a marriage from 1892 to 1898 with Edna Wallace Hopper, "the perennial flapper." He disliked discussing his marriages.

"THERE'S no one to care what becomes of me either," Ruth stated.

"But suppose you'd lost the love of your life," suggested Duncan Hunter.

"I have lost the love of my life," replied Ruth simply. "My heart's as bruised as if sticks had beat it. But life's still worth living. Time will give me something else for what I've lost."

"The optimism of youth," the man answered with a shrug.

"You have a few things yourself," Ruth reminded him. "You're not old yet. You look reasonably healthy. You've good looks—oh yes, you have, really." (This in response to a protest from him.) "You've a fine education. You've inherited good blood, social position and money. You've a good mind—"

"You think I have a good mind?" he asked eagerly.

"How could anyone doubt it?" He said, with a shake of his head and a bitter look. "That's what I've been afraid of. That people will suspect and avoid me even if I'm proven sane. I've an unsavory past, you know."

Ruth faced this thoughtfully. She said then, "That's where the fight will come. Have you any real friends here?"

"A hundred of them, I believe." "Then stay here," Ruth urged. "I think you'd find peace. Take over the old house and make it live again. There's your library, your garden—"

"Ah, yes!" he nodded. "The old garden! There's the conservatory, too. I'd like to enlarge it and put in an improved heating system. I'd like to experiment with tropical plants. Orchids—"

"Could it be done?" Ruth asked.

It was a sly challenge. It set him to talking like a stream that seeks to break a dam.

Duncan Hunter said, stopping in mid-sentence as he described a very rare orchid, "If you'll excuse me, my child, I think I'll tumble into bed. I haven't closed my eyes for four nights. This is wonderful!"

"I'm sleepy, too," Ruth said. "Good night, Mr. Hunter."

She was not surprised when he drowsily kissed her forehead. "Good night, little friend."

In interviews when the subject arose he parried queries.

He began his famous public recitations of "Casey at the Bat" in 1886. Thereafter he said it so much that he laughingly remarked he probably would be repeating the line on Resurrection morn.

Once he said: "Where or what I may be playing I must, before the evening is out, come before the curtain and pitch to Casey."

The Choir Invisible

O may I join the choir invisible
Of those immortal dead who live again
In minds made better by their presence;
Live in pulses stirred to generosity,
In deeds of daring rectitude, in scorn
For miserable aims that end with self,
In thoughts sublime that pierce the night like stars,
And with their mild persistence urge man's search
To water issues.
This is life to come,
Which martyrs' men have made more glorious
For us to strive to follow. May I reach
That purest heaven, be to other souls
The cup of strength in some great anguish,
Erkettle generous ardor, feed pure love,
Beget the smiles that have no cruelty,
Be the sweet presence of a good dif-
fus'd,
And indiffusion ever more intense!
So shall I join the choir invisible, Whose music is the gladness of the world.—Selected.

5 Congressmen

machine seem to be at least in partial accord on Wade O. Martin for U. S. senator and James A. Noe for governor. But that doesn't settle anything.

The anti-Long forces are hastening to press the advantage that an assassin's bullet has given them. They had complete plans laid for their state campaign before the tragedy. All that remained was formal agreement on the leader to be chosen from among the five U. S. representatives who formed the hub of the resistance to Huey. Now, also, one of the five will be chosen to race for Huey's senate seat.

Representative Cleveland Dear, handsome, one-time district attorney of Alexandria, up from humble surroundings, and recognized as the strongest individual in any of the state organizations, is the probable candidate for governor. He's a natural campaigner who went to congress by giving a sound reasoning to the law partner of U. S. Senator John H. Overton.

Two Senate Possibilities
Two of the representatives are rated as possible choices for Long's seat. John N. Sandlin has been the leader of the anti-Long bloc in Washington and distributor of federal money in Louisiana. He's 52, a former prosecutor and state district judge.

Ironically enough, Long was partly responsible for Sandlin being in congress. Elected in 1921, Sandlin was about ready to retire when Huey came into power. But Huey helped persuade Sandlin to seek reelection—not that he loved Sandlin more, but that he loved Sandlin's opponent less.

J. Y. Sanders, Jr., is the other senate candidate possibility. He and his father were bitter foes of the Kingfish. Young Sanders is a capable congressman and his father a strong old-line politician, former governor, and congressman.

There lies one chance for dissent among the anti. Sanders may decide to make the race against Sandlin or he may choose to contest the governor nomination with Dare.

Riley J. Wilson, dean of the Louisiana delegation in Washington, and Numa F. Montet, the fifth member of the Delta state group, are said to be interested only in returning to their house seats.

Old Regulars in Fight

The part that the Old Regular organization in New Orleans will play in the fight is problematical. With the exception of Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley, Commissioner of Public Utilities Fred A. Echart, and a few lesser lights, the entire Old Regular organization capitulated to Long about a month before his death.

Previous to the entrance of Long in state politics, the Old Regular combination was the dominating political factor.

While the Old Regulars under Commissioner of Finance A. Miles Pratt went over to Long, it was an open secret that they did so under coercion and many leaders openly expressed their contempt for Long. Pratt's motive was said to have been ambition for political advancement and a desire to be mayor of New Orleans.

His political future, because of his action, is hazy. He failed to gain popular approval and was generally regarded as a traitor to Mayor Walmsley.

Walmsley stood pat against Long. He is still the mayor, but without an organization unless there are peace terms in the future. Walmsley has gained much political and personal prestige because of his refusal to surrender to Long. Although never tremendously popular, he may cut a strong figure in reorganization plans.

Stanley Has Strength

Another name to conjure with is that of former District Attorney Eugene Stanley, forced out of office by Long. Stanley is ambitious. He wants to be mayor, governor or senator and his undiminished record of honesty and efficiency in office are attributes which cannot be overlooked.

Two federal officials in positions to exert great power in the fight for control are Frank Pedernera, a Louisiana politician since he was 18, now federal administrator for the state, and Paul E. Chase, federal administrator for the New Orleans district. Two other patronage dispensers of importance are Colonel John Patrick "Promising" Sullivan and his close friend, Edward Hightler, lawyer. Both long have been old-line politicians, and both are past Grand Exalted Rulers of the Elks.

Sullivan, a tremendous figure of a man, is a friend of James A. Farley, a good organizer, but a poor boss. He has been called "Promising" because he is said once to have pledged the same job to 78 different men.

Long Detested Both
Hightler is small, thin, discolored. Long detested both men, and had Sullivan indicted in a state court on some charge of juggling in a promotion scheme. Prominent anti-Long men immediately began to anticipate a reign of pseudo-legal terror and wondered whether they'd all land in jail. They were reassured, though, when Sullivan got his case—a bill of information filed against him—into the federal court.

Besides the Old Regulars and their Chetaw Club, corresponding to New York's Tammany, there are no strong anti-Long organizations in the state. The Young Democrats of Louisiana is one group, headed by Ben F. Dawkins, Jr., of Alexandria, son of a district judge.

Another is the Square Deal Association, outgrowth of a protest meeting of Standard Oil employees some years ago, when it was feared that Huey's 5-cents-a-barrel refining tax might cost them their jobs.

resent the difference between the price of cotton on 10 designated spot markets the day the cotton is sold and 12 cents a pound, to their members as soon as the co-operatives come into possession of the lint.

Byrnes said that he and Bankhead believed this plan should be broadened to permit any cotton buyer to obtain cotton at the market price and advance the subsidy to growers, being reimbursed when the government subsidies are made to the growers. The first subsidy payment is not expected to be made until around December 15.

Felix Waitkus Doesn't Get to Lithuania, But Reaches Ireland

BALLINROSE, County Mayo, Ireland.—(AP)—Officers of the Irish Free State Air Force arrived here Monday to undertake the dismantling of the monoplane of Felix Waitkus, American transatlantic flier, smashed in the forced landing which ended his 3,000-mile solo flight from New York.

The 28-year-old aviator, uninjured in the crashup and refreshed by a night's sleep, said his future plans were undecided pending an examination of the plane.

Gets Across Atlantic

BALLINROSE, County Mayo, Ireland.—(AP)—The trans-Atlantic solo flight of Felix Waitkus, 28-year-old Wisconsin aviator, ended Sunday in a smashup in a rough field but the flier was uninjured.

Fog-bound and buffeted by storms along the Irish coast, Waitkus, who had hoped to fly nonstop from New York to Kaunas, Lithuania, brought his plane down in a hazardous landing.

Despite the bad weather, Waitkus made good time. He had been in the air less than 22 hours when coast guardsmen at Headford saw his plane.

Waitkus took off from Floyd Bennett field, New York, at 5:45 a. m. Saturday in the face of reports of extremely poor weather off Newfoundland.

and Anthony Eden of Great Britain conferred what to do, the League's Committee of Five decided to meet Tuesday before reporting to the League Council that its plan for peace has been rejected by Italy and accepted by Lithuania.

British spokesmen characterized the Laval-Eden conference as "very satisfactory" and said it "reaffirmed the mutual desire of France and Great Britain to work together at this critical moment." Whether that meant possible naval collaboration was not divulged.

The news from Rome told of a long conference between Mussolini and Sir Eric Drummond, British ambassador, which gave rise to speculation in both British and Italian quarters there on the possibility of direct negotiations between Italy and Great Britain to settle the controversy—at least insofar as it reacts upon Europe.

Sir Eric presented Il Duce with a personal message from Sir Samuel Hoare, British foreign secretary.

Aside from this, the official Italian Gazette disclosed a new 2,500,000,000 lire appropriation for Italy's colonies and tentative preparations were announced for the evacuation of port cities, should that become necessary.
